SINGLES

NEC Wheelchair Singles Finals

The NEC Wheelchair Singles Finals bring together the world's eight best men's, women's and quad singles players. Each player faces three of their peers in round-robin competition, and the top two players in each of the two round-robin groups go forward to the knock-out semi-finals.

DOUBLES

UNIQLO Wheelchair Doubles Finals

The six highest-ranked men's, women's and quad doubles teams compete for the UNIQLO Wheelchair Doubles Finals titles. Each doubles pairing plays two other pairings in one of two round-robin groups and the top two partnerships in each group go forward to the knock-out semi-finals.

> "This year is particularly significant as wheelchair tennis celebrates its 50th anniversary."

On behalf of World Tennis, it is my great pleasure to welcome you to the 2026 NEC Wheelchair Singles Finals and UNIQLO Wheelchair Doubles Finals at the Centre Internacional de Tennis de Cornellà in Barcelona.

The world's eight top ranked men's, women's and quad singles players compete for the coveted NEC Wheelchair Singles Finals titles, while the top six doubles pairings in each division will contest the prestigious UNIQLO Wheelchair Doubles Finals. In total, 37 of the world's leading wheelchair tennis players will come together for the season-ending championships, returning to Spain for the second time since 2023.

This year is particularly significant as wheelchair tennis celebrates its 50th anniversary. It is also an opportunity to recognise the contribution of NEC, which has supported the sport since 1991 and been title sponsor of the Singles Finals since their introduction in 1994. We are delighted to welcome NEC into the World Tennis Wheelchair Hall of Champions in recognition of its longstanding commitment to the growth of wheelchair tennis.

I would also like to thank UNIQLO, title sponsor of the UNIQLO Wheelchair Tennis Tour and the Doubles Finals since 2014, for its continued commitment to the sport and its future.

These championships would not be possible without the dedication of everyone involved behind the scenes, particularly the Catalan Tennis Federation, our local partners, and the staff and volunteers at the Centre Internacional de Tennis de Cornellà. I am grateful for their efforts in bringing these events to Barcelona and helping make this week possible.

I wish all the players the very best of luck and everyone involved an enjoyable and memorable week of competition.

> “There is something profoundly moving about watching athletes believe in their potential and overcome obstacles.”

Welcome to the NEC Wheelchair Singles Finals 2026

This year, we celebrate a significant milestone as wheelchair tennis commemorates its 50th anniversary as a sport, and NEC marks its 35th year of continuous support for the sport. I would like to express my sincere gratitude to the athletes who continually push their limits, the longtime supporters of the sport, and all the fans who cheer for these athletes so passionately.

Recently, NEC was selected as an inductee of the World Tennis Hall of Champions in recognition for its contributions to the sport. I would like to share this tremendous honor and celebrate together with everyone involved in the development of wheelchair tennis.

Today, wheelchair tennis is captivating audiences worldwide. Beyond its appeal as a sport, there is something profoundly moving about watching athletes believe in their potential and overcome obstacles while competing on a level playing field.

The deeply rooted values that underpin this sport also mirror those of the NEC Group’s Purpose, which is to “create the social values of safety, security, fairness and efficiency to promote a more sustainable world where everyone has the chance to reach their full potential.” NEC’s support of wheelchair tennis reflects our corporate philosophy, and we remain committed to contributing to the creation of a society where anyone—regardless of nationality, gender, or ability—can embrace their dreams and take on new challenges.

I would like to extend my heartfelt congratulations to the athletes competing in this tournament and express my deepest respect for the tireless efforts that brought them here. I look forward to seeing everyone demonstrate their full potential and outstanding athletic abilities through matches that will bring excitement and inspiration to the spectators. I firmly believe this tournament will help further the development of wheelchair tennis and inspire the next generation of young athletes to pursue their dreams and goals.

In closing, I would like to express my sincere gratitude to all the organizations and individuals who helped make this tournament a reality. Barcelona, where this year’s tournament is being held, is a city steeped in sports history and culture. May this week of intense competition prove to be a truly rewarding and unforgettable experience for everyone.

Yours sincerely,
Takayuki Morita

> "We are living through the golden age of wheelchair tennis in Spain."

It is an immense honour for me to welcome everyone to the 2026 Wheelchair Finals, which will be held in Barcelona. I do not think I am exaggerating when I say that we are living through the golden age of wheelchair tennis in Spain.

Since we took over the leadership of Spanish tennis, we have been very clear that one of our key priorities had to be the development of this discipline. From the outset, we have supported it with the aim of ensuring that our players receive proper training and, at the same time, become competitive. I believe we have achieved both objectives. We now have more and more schools across the country, and our athletes continue to improve. Martín de la Puente and Dani Caverzaschi have clearly been part of the world elite for some time, alongside players such as Quico Tur, Jorge Iglesias and Enrique Siscar, among others. Today, Spain has one of the highest overall standards of wheelchair tennis in the world, and our leading players regularly reach the final rounds of major tournaments.

This year, I am particularly excited because we have finally achieved a milestone we have worked hard towards: establishing a team, a women's national team, that can compete in international competitions. It has been an effort well worth making, because we have always been convinced that wheelchair tennis should also offer a future for women and girls.

I would like to express my full support to everyone who makes an important international competition such as the 2026 Wheelchair Finals possible. My congratulations to you all.

> "The Wheelchair Finals represent much more than a major sporting competition."

It is a great honour for the Catalan Tennis Federation to once again host the NEC Wheelchair Singles Finals and the UNIQLO Wheelchair Doubles Finals, this time at the outstanding facilities of the Centre Internacional de Tennis de Cornellà.

At the Catalan Tennis Federation, we are committed to making tennis accessible to everyone, regardless of their abilities or personal circumstances. We see sport as a powerful tool for participation, inclusion and personal development, capable of creating opportunities, breaking down barriers and promoting values that extend far beyond competition. This commitment is reflected in the various projects promoted by the Federation, aimed at encouraging tennis participation among diverse communities and across different social settings.

The Wheelchair Finals represent much more than a major sporting competition. They are a showcase of the talent, dedication and determination of the world's best players, as well as a testament to the exceptional level of excellence achieved in wheelchair tennis. Having the opportunity to welcome this outstanding event back to Catalonia, following its first edition here in 2023 at the Emilio Sánchez Academy, is both a privilege and a responsibility: to continue contributing to the development of this discipline and to give it the visibility and recognition it deserves.

I would like to express my sincere gratitude to World Tennis, the Royal Spanish Tennis Federation (RFET), Barcelona Pro Tennis Academy, our sponsors, Cornellà City Council and all the other institutions that have made this new edition possible. Their collaboration is essential to the continued growth of tennis and to making events of this magnitude a reality.

NEC Wheelchair Singles Finals Preview

> The NEC Wheelchair Singles Finals brings together the top eight men's, women's and quad singles players in a unique scenario that requires the eventual champions to negotiate three round-robin group matches and two knockout matches to claim one of the most coveted titles in wheelchair tennis.

For the past five years Tokito Oda and Alfie Hewett have shared the men's singles title between them, and there's little to suggest that that would have been any different this year had it not been for Oda's withdrawal from the year-end championships.

In Oda's absence, the only player among this year's men's entries to have beaten Hewett so far in 2026 is Martin de la Puente after he won their Australian Open semi-final.

The last time the year-end championships were held in Barcelona, in 2023, De la Puente and Gustavo Fernandez joined Oda and Hewett in the semi-finals and the current world No. 3 and world No. 4 will hope to live up to their current rankings and do the same again, especially in front of their respective Spanish fans.

De la Puente and Fernandez are the only two players to have interrupted Oda and Hewett's monopoly on Grand Slam and WC1000 final berths this season, having contested the French Riviera Open final between them in the absence of the two players ranked above them, with De la Puente having also beaten Hewett to the Australian Open decider.

Twelve months ago, Diede de Groot missed out on a place in the women's singles field at the year-end finals as she continued to work her way back up the rankings after her eight months out of competition following the Paris 2024 Paralympics.

A year on, six-time Singles Finals champion De Groot has now regained the world No. 1 ranking from three-time women's singles champion Yui Kamiji and looks to be the player in pole position to wrest the year-end title away from Kamiji for the first time since their three-set final in Barcelona in 2023.

While De Groot has reached all four Grand Slam finals this season and Kamiji completed her career Grand Slam with victory over De Groot in their Wimbledon final, Li Xiaohui and Ksénia Chasteau have also been among the finalists at this year's four majors, with Australian Open champion Li most recently having beaten Kamiji to the women's singles gold medal at the Asian Para Games.

Also among this year's Singles Finals entries, Aniek van Koot, Wang Ziying, Lizzy de Greef and Kgothatso Montjane have all earned themselves a place in WC1000 finals during 2026.

> "Vink went on to complete his first calendar Grand Slam"

While the men's and women's rolls of honour have each been dominated by just two players over the last five years, the same is true in the quad singles, with Sam Schroder and Niels Vink having contested four successive finals between them before current world No. 3 Guy Sasson beat Vink to reach the final and finished runner-up to Schroder last year.

The world's top two ranked players have also contested three of this year's four Grand Slam finals between them, with world No. 4 Ahmet Kaplan joining world No. 1 Vink in this year's Roland Garros final before Vink went on to complete his first calendar Grand Slam with victory over Schroder again in the US Open final.

While Vink aims for a fourth NEC Singles Finals title this year, with Schroder set to challenge for a third title, Sasson will be among the leading contenders to try and stop the two Dutch players, having also beaten Schroder in the semis at the Tram Barcelona Open and the Lexus British Open before going on to join Schroder and Vink as a two-time WC1000 champion this season.

Of the other quad singles entries in Barcelona, 17-year-old world No. 5 Jin Woodman should be a live contender to join three of the four players ranked above him in the semi-finals if repeating the kind of form that saw him beat Schroder and Vink in successive tournaments during the grass court season.

Doubles preview

UNIQLO Wheelchair Doubles Finals

> With UNIQLO Wheelchair Doubles Finals competition starting with two round-robin groups of three pairings in each of the men's, women's and quad doubles events, getting off to a good start is going to be especially important, guaranteeing an exciting week from the outset.

Men's doubles

Both of last year's finalists head the men's doubles entries again this year with three-time Doubles Finals champions Alfie Hewett and Gordon Reid hoping that a return to Barcelona will see the 26-time Grand Slam champions regain the title they last won in 2023 in Catalonia.

However, reigning champions Martin de la Puente and Ruben Spaargaren will be a tough partnership to beat, and while De la Puente has won three of the last four editions of the Doubles Finals with different partners he would dearly love to do so in front of a home Spanish crowd.

There again, so would Dani Caverzaschi, but Caverzaschi and former Doubles Masters champion Tom Egberink would need to improve on two doubles semi-finals together this season.

Swiss Open champions Stephane Houdet and Ji Zhenxu, and recent Open du Loiret finalists Ben Bartram and Daniel Rodrigues will also be live contenders to reach the knockout semi-finals.

Women's doubles

Both of last year's women's doubles finalists also return to this year's UNIQLO Wheelchair Doubles Finals, with Li Xiaohui and Wang Ziying having beaten Yui Kamiji and Zhu Zhenzhen when they met in round-robin competition 12 months ago, before Kamiji and Zhu reversed that result in the final.

While both partnerships have shared this year's four Grand Slam titles between them, neither pairing can boast a record at the four majors to match that of three-time Doubles Finals champions Diede de Groot and Aniek van Koot. This year De Groot and Van Koot have won their first three UNIQLO Wheelchair Tennis Tour titles together since De Groot's return to competition in May 2025 following eight months out of the sport following the Paris 2024 Paralympics.

Without a win together in their round-robin group last year, Guo Luoyao and Kgothatso Montjane return to try again this year and have title-winning form this season, as have Jinte Bos and Lizzy de Greef, who beat Ksénia Chasteau and Lucy Shuker in the Hamburg Open final.

Quad doubles

A new winning partnership will be added to the quad doubles roll of honour this year, with 2025 champions Guy Sasson and Niels Vink playing with different partners – namely Gonzalo Lazarte and Ahmet Kaplan, respectively.

However, with Lazarte and Sasson a new partnership, and Kaplan and Vink having not partnered each other in competition since 2024, Sam Schroder and Jin Woodman are the pairing with the most eye-catching recent results on paper, having won this season's US Open together, as well as the Japan Open and the French Riviera Open titles.

However, they are not the only Grand Slam champions contesting the quad doubles in Barcelona, as Andy Lapthorne reunites with Donald Ramphadi, his 2023 Roland Garros-winning partner, as they play together for the first time since the 2024 Doubles Finals.

About the Catalan Tennis Federation

The Catalan Tennis Federation (FCT) is committed to promoting, developing and growing tennis in Catalonia in all its dimensions. With clubs as the backbone of the sport, it drives initiatives to bring tennis closer to the public, encourage participation and promote the values of effort, respect, self-improvement and community.

Catalonia is also a leading destination for international tennis, hosting top-level competitions that help showcase the region to the world. The FCT works to promote and support events that put Catalonia on the international tennis map, strengthen the connection between Catalan tennis and the world's elite, and bring top-level tennis closer to fans.

This commitment also extends to adaptive tennis, a discipline that exemplifies the power of sport to overcome barriers and create opportunities. The Federation is committed to raising awareness of and developing adaptive tennis, expanding opportunities to participate and increasing the visibility of its players, with the aim of making tennis increasingly inclusive and accessible.

In this context, hosting the Wheelchair Finals in Barcelona represents a great opportunity to showcase wheelchair tennis internationally and recognise the talent, dedication and competitive spirit of the world's best players.

The Catalan Tennis Federation is delighted that Catalonia is hosting an event of this stature and reaffirms its commitment to continuing to work towards making tennis a tool for social transformation, inclusion and equal opportunities, and a sport accessible to everyone.

Going beyond imagination.

NEC has been supporting wheelchair tennis for over 30 years.
Watching these athletes from the sidelines, we' ve seen them rise to new challenges.
Taking great pride in this history and the bonds we have developed, we remain deeply committed to moving forward together.

NEC is an international partner of the World Tennis.
